How to download app on the app store. Apps to download mod apps.

Smartphone app stores are well established at this point, and as much as we love to see new apps become available, that also means the inevitable: sometimes apps go away. Here's what you can do if your favorites disappear. Why Do Apps Disappear? Before we talk about how you can get apps that are no longer available to download from your phone's respective app store, let's first talk about why apps get removed in the first place. Generally, this is a call by the developer; the app gets pulled because they no longer support it. Case in point: Epic Games recently pulled all versions of Infinity Blade from the iOS App Store for that exact reason. The company claimed lack of resources to support the games "at a level that meets [their] current standards." Makes sense—if you're going to do something, might as well do it right, after all. More often than not, this is how it goes. The app becomes more trouble than it's worth to continue supporting, its features get moved into another app from the same developer (and there's no need for redundancy), or the developer is dissolved completely. The good news is that if the app you're looking for isn't available for any of those reasons, you should still be able to re-download it if you've previously had it downloaded (this is especially true for paid apps). That said, it's worth noting that if the app has been removed by the app store company itself—Apple in the case of the iOS App Store or Google for the Play Store—then it's most likely gone forever. If they pulled it, there's a good reason for that so you can't expect to get it back easily. If the app is no longer in the app store, however, here's the easiest way to get it back for both Android or iOS devices. How to Download Apps That Are No Longer in the iOS App Store If you're an iOS user, your options are pretty limited—you have to get your apps from the App Store. Fortunately, if you bought or downloaded an app that is no longer available, you can probably still grab it. First, fire up the App Store, then tap on the account icon in the top right corner. From there, tap on "Purchased." To see all the apps that aren't already on your phone or iPad (which is the likely scenario if you're trying to pull something that's no longer in the App Store), tap on "Not on this iPhone/iPad." From there, you can scroll through the list to find the app you want to install, then tap the little cloud icon on the right to download it. Easy peasy. How to Download Apps That Are No Longer in Google Play While you only have one option to download deprecated apps on iOS, there are a couple of ways to do this on Android: get it from the Google Play Store or download the APK and sideload the app. While the former is the most straightforward way, the latter offers a way to install apps that have been removed from Google Play completely. How to Install Removed Apps from Google Play First, open the Play Store, then open the menu by tapping the three lines in the top left (inside the search box). From there, choose "My Apps & Games." Once this menu opens, choose "Library." This will list every app you've ever downloaded from Google Play. Unfortunately, there isn't an easy way to search this list, so if you're looking for an older app, it could take quite a while to find it by scrolling through. The good news is that you have another option: sideload the APK. How to Sideload Apps That Are No Longer in Google Play Sorting through an insane list of apps can be a huge pain, so in that case, it can be easier to sideload the app. If you've never sideloaded an app before you'll probably want to take a look at our full tutorial. It's not a complicated process, but how you do it will depend on which version of Android your phone is running. RELATED: How to Sideload Apps on Android If you have sideloaded apps before and just need a good place to find something that is no longer in the Play Store, APK Mirror is your answer. It's the best place on the net to grab Android apps to sideload. It's a trustworthy source that only features free apps (there are no pirated apps on APK Mirror), and every app is legitimate. It's also worth mentioning that there are several versions of some apps depending on the model of your phone and the hardware details. If you're not sure which APK you should install, check out this primer. So, for example, if let's say you want to install Sketch (a now-defunct Evernote app). You'd simply grab the APK from APK Mirror and install it on your device using the above instructions. Nothing to it! RELATED: How to Find Your Android Device's Info for Correct APK Downloads Sky's popular new iPhone app counts as an entry Apple has set up a massive international promotion to mark the one billionth iPhone and iPod Touch application downloaded from its iTunes App Store. Downloads, which are currently running at over 100 million a month, are likely to tip over the billion mark by early May, bringing the Billion App Countdown Promotion to an end. A single lucky winner will receive a 17-inch MacBook Pro, an iPod Touch 32GB, a $10,000 (€6850) iTunes Gift Certificate and an Apple Time Capsule. Lots of countries, one chance to win! The competition is open everyone in the United States, Australia, Austria, Belgium, Canada, Denmark, Finland, France, Germany, Greece, Ireland, Italy, Japan, Luxembourg, Netherlands, New Zealand, Norway, Portugal, Spain, Sweden, Switzerland and - naturally - the United Kingdom. Every application downloaded will count as separate entry (up to 25 a day) and non-iPhone owners can enter at the Apple website. Basically, you're looking at about a 70 million to one shot to win, so don't go holding your breath. Innovation winner More good news for Apple, which was today crowned the most innovative company in the world by BusinessWeek magazine. All of the top ten 'most innovative companies' in the special report - which was voted for by top executives worldwide - are high-tech firms, with the exception of Wal-Mart at number ten. The runners-up were Google (no. 2), Toyota, Microsoft, Nintendo, IBM, Hewlett-Packard, Research in Motion and Nokia (no. 9). After two and a half years (or so) of existence Apple's iOS App Store has seen 10 billion downloads. To celebrate, Apple is handing out one $10,000 iTunes gift card. Folks were entered into the drawing by downloading an app from the App Store or visiting Apple's website between January 6 and the download of the 10 billionth app. Contest aside; this marks a huge milestone for Apple and the storefront launched a few years ago to go along with Apple's iPhone SDK. Apple CEO Steve Jobs first publicly demonstrated the then-new App Store in March of 2008 along with the iPhone 2.0 software, calling it "an application we've written to deliver apps to the iPhone." And deliver it did. It took nine months to reach one billion downloads and a little over a year to hit two billion. All the while Apple collected a nice percentage of revenue from support the games "at a level that meets [their] current standards." Memefee says, "I feel that by putting too much control on users, you don't get them exposed to other user interfaces and other solutions. I like it when users come to us with a business problem and say, 'If it just acted like X app, then that would meet my needs.'" On the spectrum that ranges from total control to total freedom, Marist College in Poughkeepsie, N.Y., is on the freedom end. The IT staff supports tablets for use by students, faculty and staff, and the college allows users to load anything they want on the devices, even those owned by the college, as long as the users abide by college policies and regulations. "We believe that employees will select apps that make them more productive or their work lives easier," says Bill Thirsk, vice president of IT at Marist. "It clearly fosters creativity. And the IT department does not want to be the app police. We are likely to miss great apps if we block innovation." Should an application appear that's harmful to the college's network, is out of line with policies or in some way breaks the law, officials will block it from being downloaded or transmitted via college-owned networks. Further, students "must also abide by our network acceptable-use policy," Thirsk says. Nevertheless, "as the CIO of an educational institution dedicated to innovation," he adds, "I must support faculty and students with just about any and all use cases that are presented."
